Trip to Hights-in-the-oaks, near Paoy, Benguet Province, Luzon, P. I. July 19 to Aug. 4, 1907.

July 19, 1907. - Left Camp John Hay (near Baguio) at 7:30 A.M., intending to spend the night at the house of a wealthy Igorot named Ceop; but when we reached Ceop's place at ^{Duckayon} ~~Lakeyan~~, the Igorot cargadores failed to mention that Ceop lived close-by; so, after stopping long enough to cook rice and eat, we proceeded as far as the Igorot pueblo of , where we found a good native house in which to sleep, which was fortunate, as it rained hard nearly all night.

During the day, when riding a short distance in advance of the cargadores, I met an Igorot woman, and, following close behind her a ~~full~~ grown doe. The deer turned off from the trail, ^{when only} a few yards from me, ~~it~~ and descended obliquely through rank grass to the wooded creek bottom at the foot of a very steep hill. She often stopped and turned to look back, proceeding by a series of graceful leaps, clearing the high grass. This was a perfectly wild deer that had not learned to fear guns. Of the wild woman she had not the slightest fear; but a white man on a pony was a more thrilling sight.

July 20, 1907. - Left at sunrise and reached Hights-in-the-oaks shortly after dark, having lost the trail at and explored a deep valley to the Northeast, which occasioned ~~much~~ the loss of several hours but enabled me to make some interesting observations. ^{Pack by the cargadores who returned to Baguio.} Returned my pony to Gov.

July 21 to August 2 were spent at the house of Mr. Guy Lay Haight, at his farm called Haight's-in-the-oaks.

August 3, 1907. - Left Haight's-in-the-oaks in company of Mr. Haight, and walked to where we gathered plants and spent a rainy night in a new shack built for a resting house by the Igorotes.

August 4, 1907. - Walked to Camp John Hay.
